Gold is a rare metal with a lovely colour. It is easy to be shaped. As gold is so soft, it can be beaten into very thin sheets and it can also be drawn out into very fine wires. Gold is an excellent material for making beautiful objects such as jewellery. The ancient Egyptians prized gold so much that they believed that gold belonged only to their kings, so they put many gold objects in their pharaohs' tombs. The Egyptians were very clever goldsmiths as they could beat gold into sheets.

The gold which is used to make jewellery is usually mixed with other metals. This not only makes the gold jewellery cheaper, but also harder. Because it was scarce and therefore valuable, gold was formerly used as money. Many countries keep gold in banks. They can change this gold into money by selling it to other countries. About two thirds of all the gold in the world is kept in this way. Gold is usually buried deep underground. It can also be found in rivers and seas, but it would cost far more money to be extracted than the gold is worth.

Travel has become much easier than ever before. People began to go on journeys all over the world much more often than they used to in the past. Now, at the start of the new century, travel has become a major industry. Some people travel on business, while others go abroad to study. But by far, the greatest number of people who travel to other countries are tourists. Tourists visit other countries to spend their holidays there to see the world and to observe another culture. Tourism is one of the fastest growing industries in the world today. When people travel to another country, they spend money there: in hotels, in restaurants and on buying souvenirs. This is good for the economy of the country they are visiting. Making friends with people from other countries is another benefit of tourism, because this is one of the ways in which people of different races and cultures can begin to understand each other.

My name is Tarek. I do well in school, and people think I am smart because of it. But it's not true. In fact, three years ago, I had some hard time in school. I used to watch video games and wasted most of my time playing and chatting with my friends. However, I decided to get serious about school and made a few changes. First, I decided I would become interested in whatever I learn. Then I started to work hard every day and never forgot any of my school work. I said to myself I would never, never be a loser. Finally, I made school more important than my friends and fun. After making these changes, I became an active student in classroom discussions. Then my test scores began to be higher. I still remember the first time that someone tried to bully me because "I was smart." How exciting! It seems to me that being smart is simply a matter of working hard and being interested. After all I knew that playing a new video game is hard work, but it doesn't help you get successful or get a good job.

A Choose the correct answer from a, b, c or d:

1) The best title for this passage can be .....

a Having fun

b How to waste your time

c Having friends

d How to be successful
